give the cumbersome-looking 41-ton (seven tons more than the M-50) weapon remarkable manoeuvrability. One of the great advantages of the new gun, which is reportedly highly accurate, firing in flat as well as parabolic trajectories, is its increased traverse—30 degrees to each side as opposed to 10 degrees left and 17 degrees right on the M-50. The L-33 which has a crew of 12 is built at the Soltan works — the industrial complex which also manufactures mortars and other cannon for the I.D.F.

LARGEST GUN
The new 203-mm. M-110 howitzer is the largest cannon in use with the I.D.F. It lobes a 90.8 kilo shell (containing 16.5 kg. of T.N.T.) 16.5 kms. and is the most accurate in the artillery corps. The chassis of the M-110 is identical with that of the 107-mm. long-range (32.5 kms.) M-175, making it possible to interchange barrels in under two hours. Weighing 26.5 tons and having a crew of 14, the gun's cruising range is 450 kms. at a speed of 45 k.p.h. One disadvantage is that the gun can carry only two shells, and has to travel with a mobile ammunition supply. Fully hydraulic loading systems give it a firing rate of a shell per minute. The twin 20mm anti-aircraft gun

Diplomats' feelings spared, on parade
Jerusalem Post Reporter
The Foreign Ministry has not sent out any invitations to the diplomatic corps for the I.D.F. parade on Independence Day. Commenting on reports that U.S., British and French diplomats would not be attending, officials explained that the Ministry wanted to avoid embarrassing the foreign envoys, some of whom refuse to attend the parade because it passes through East Jerusalem, and therefore sent out no invitations. The entire diplomatic corps is expected to be represented at the President's reception in the afternoon of Independence Day and at the Foreign Minister's dinner in the evening. (Reharsals — Page 3) was in use during the War of Attrition and scored several successes in the Sinai. Though not radar controlled, its sighting system is accurate. It has a firing rate of 10 shells per minute per second, and the two guns are fed from two magazines holding 60 shells each. The turret is electrically operated and the guns can traverse 360 degrees, having an elevation ranging from 10 to 90 degrees. The gun has three types of shells, explosive for aerial targets, armour-piercing and incendiary shells for ground targets. Mounted on the back of a half-track the gun has great mobility and can go into action within seconds. News of the incorporation into the Armoured Corps of the Soviet-built T-54 and T-56 tanks was released in October last year, but yesterday it was revealed for the first time that the tanks have been refitted with the 105mm cannon, standard on all Armoured Corps tanks. The gun is of British manufacture. The tanks have also been modified inside to increase crew comfort, and for the reorganization of shell storage. The installation of the new guns included improved sights, though the original Soviet sights are highly regarded — and an electrical, as opposed to a mechanical, firing system. The "Dabur" class patrol boat became operational shortly after the Six Day War, when Israel's maritime borders increased by some 500 per cent and the Navy searched for fast, mobile boats to block infiltration attempts by enemy intelligence units and terrorists.

PROVEN SHIP
The "Dabur" is a modification of the boat used by the Americans in Vietnam, having a five metre longer hull, and being 1.2 metres wider. Despite the increase in size, the ship maintains its speed of 25 knots. Vast improvements were made in the boat's radar and electrical systems. The "Dabur" has a crew of six and a displacement of 35 tons. It is powered by two diesel engines. Its armament includes two 20mm. anti-aircraft guns, two 12.7mm. machineguns, and depth-charge launchers. The ships are deployed in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, and can be operated in all weather. In fact, despite the boat's small size, it navigates high seas and swells better than the Saar-class missile boats. The "Dabur" has proven itself highly effective against terrorist penetrations. It is capable of long-range detection and approaching the target swiftly and unexpectedly. Its armaments are more suited to combating infiltrators than those of the missile boats. The U.S.-built Bell-206's existence in the air force became known two months ago, and the helicopter was displayed on Air Force Day before an invited audience last year. Being light, fast and manoeuvrable, the Bell-206 is primarily designed for rescue operations, the evacuation of wounded and for the transportation of commanders in the field. It is designed to function in all weather, and is propelled by an Allison turbine engine. It has a maximum flight duration of four hours, and an operational ceiling of 2,100 metres. Equipped with an external cargo hook, the plane can carry loads of 300 kgs. It can carry up to three passengers or two stretchers. The helicopter's take-off weight is 1,300 kgs., while its maximum take-off weight is 1,450 kgs. No mention of armaments was made.

War crimes: U.S. woman to be extradited
NEW YORK (AP). — A U.S. judge ruled yesterday that Mrs. Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, a 53-year-old New York City housewife, should be turned over to West Germany for trial as a war criminal for her actions as a Nazi concentration camp guard during World War II. However, Brooklyn Federal Court Judge Jacob Mishler stayed the extradition of Mrs. Ryan until May 4 to allow her attorneys to try to overturn the decision.

E. J'lem policeman confesses murders
An East Jerusalem policeman turned himself in at the Old City police station Monday, telling his story of how he had just killed his wife and her mother. The man, Dahar Alasha, 32, a resident of the Old City, was arrested for interrogation. Neighbours told the police investigators they thought the constable killed his 30-year-old wife Suraya and his mother-in-law, Khadija, 70, because he was opposed to having the old woman move in with them. The two bodies were found in Alasha's flat after the policeman turned himself in. The preliminary investigation showed the woman had been killed with Alasha's service weapon. The suspect has two children, an 18-month-old son and a seven-month-old daughter. He took them to a neighbour before going to the "Kish-leh" police station, just inside Jaffa Gate. (INM)

Golda warns Arabs they can't win war

By ERNIE MEYER
Jerusalem Post Reporter
Prime Minister Golda Meir said yesterday that "if Egypt or Syria should attack Israel now they would have less chance of success than President Nasser had in 1967."

Israel is stronger than it was six years ago and "I am sure President Sadat's advisers tell him that he has no chance of victory whatsoever," she said. It would be a pity for the lives of the young Egyptians sent into a battle their leaders know they cannot win. "I hope for their own sakes the Egyptians will not carry out their threats," she added.

Mrs. Meir was replying to questions by Hebrew University students who packed the Wise Auditorium on the Givat Ram campus.

Asked about the Government's attitude to the Jackson amendment which would deny U.S. economic benefits to the Soviet Union over its obstruction to Jewish emigration, Mrs. Meir said that relaxation of the ransom tax was mostly due to the intervention of President Nixon during his Moscow visit. She said she was happy to see so many Senators support the Jackson amendment, but that the Israel Government could not and should not intervene in the internal affairs of the U.S. Any attempt to interfere in the discussion between the Senate and the U.S. Government on how to assist Russian Jewry would not help, and could only hurt, she said.

Mrs. Meir added that for over 20 years the Israel Government had worked on all fronts to exert pressure on the Russians to let Jews go. "When the full story can be told it will emerge that Russian Jewry was not abandoned even for one day," she said.

Asked why she opposed a Palestinian state on the West Bank and in Gaza, Mrs. Meir said that she had not heard Arabs say that they wanted such a state. Only Jews want it, she said. Why didn't the Arabs create such a state before 1967, when they had the opportunity, she asked. Today its only purpose would be as a bridgehead against Israel, she added.

GOLDA TO SAY SHE'LL STAY ON

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Premier Golda Meir is expected to publicly announce her decision to stay on in office in about ten days time, authoritative Labour Party sources reported last night. They said Mrs. Meir is expected to make her long-awaited announcement shortly after Independence Day. The possibility that she might even call a special press conference is not ruled out.

SADAT VOWS TO END THE CEASE-FIRE

By ANAN SAFADI, Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter
Egyptian President Anwar Sadat yesterday vowed to break the Middle East deadlock, stressing that continuation of the cease-fire could only harm the interest of the Arab nation.

Saudi Arabia would stop oil exports
By DAVID LENNON
Jerusalem Post Correspondent
LONDON. — Saudi Arabia has assured Egypt that if and when hostilities with Israel are resumed, export of Saudi crude oil will be stopped at Gulf and Mediterranean terminals, the "Financial Times" reports from Beirut.

Cairo was also informed that if the present Middle East stalemate continued without fighting breaking out, Saudi Arabia would keep up its present rate of production but would abstain from increasing exports. The news of this undertaking was leaked in conjunction with the visit in Cairo last week of Egyptian War Minister General Ahmed Ismail. The General was thought to have inspected Egyptian pilots who have been receiving training on the Saudi airforce's British-built Lightning fighter-interceptors.

He expressed his astonishment at the identification with American Middle East political aims, emphasizing that the question of the Middle East cease-fire and a subsequent political settlement remains an outstanding issue between Cairo and Moscow although all other differences had been settled between them.

REJECTS SUEZ ACCORD
Sadat reiterated that Egypt would accept no partial or separate political settlements with Israel, nor would it negotiate with her. The Egyptian President denounced U.S. proposals for an interim settlement aimed at reopening the Suez Canal as a first step towards a Middle East reconciliation, charging that the American Middle East moves were a "myth and deception."

FBI men posted at White House to guard files

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — FBI agents yesterday moved into the offices of three departing White House aides while the U.S. Senate passed a resolution urging President Nixon to appoint an outside investigator to head the administration's investigation of the Watergate bugging affair.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the agents of the F.B.I. had been ordered to protect official papers in the offices of former aides John Ehrlichman, H.R. Haldeman and White House Counsel John Dean. But authoritative sources said the agents were also checking papers in the offices.

Mr. Ziegler denied suggestions that the White House was concerned that the departing officials would take White House files. (The Associated Press reported that yesterday morning Haldeman and Ehrlichman were seen leaving the White House carrying stacks of documents. Soon after, it became known that Nixon's Watergate investigators had posted F.B.I. agents at their offices and other locations where Watergate-related files are kept.)

(Sources say that a Haldeman-Ehrlichman search for documentation began days before President Nixon accepted their resignation Monday and is an attempt to prove their claim of innocence.) Mr. Ziegler said Mr. Haldeman and Mr. Ehrlichman had agreed with the guarding procedure, and that if they wanted to look at any documents in their offices they would have to do so under supervision of the F.B.I. agents.

Informed sources said the presence of the F.B.I. at the White House indicated that Mr. Elliot Richardson, former Defence Secretary who was nominated Monday as Attorney-General, had lost no time in tackling the Watergate case. The former Attorney-General, Richard Kleindienst, resigned on the grounds that he was involved with people connected with the case.

Many Congressmen joined in widespread bipartisan praise for Mr. Nixon's drastic shake-up of his advisers, and his acceptance of all responsibility even though he had no prior knowledge of the bugging. But there was enough dissatisfaction and disquiet to indicate that the scandal would not disappear quickly. The focus of complaints in Congress was that the President failed to accede to demands that an in-

Jerusalem Post Correspondent
NEW YORK. — The Chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, Mr. Jacob Stein, met yesterday with Dr. Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security affairs, who leaves for Moscow tomorrow and is expected to raise the question of Soviet Jewry in his discussions with the Russian leadership. Mr. Stein will arrive in Israel on Thursday and will meet with Israel Government officials. The President's Conference decided on Monday to avoid a con-

Nixon jokes with Brandt

WASHINGTON. — President Nixon yesterday outlined to West German Chancellor Willy Brandt his ideas for revitalising the Atlantic partnership.

The meeting, lasting an hour and 40 minutes, began immediately after welcoming ceremonies in which a cheerful and relaxed Mr. Nixon — turning aside from the Watergate bugging scandal — joked with his guest while posing for photographers in warm sunshine at the entrance to the White House.

Presidential spokesman Ronald Ziegler said that the two leaders reviewed the international situation as it had developed since their last talks at the Florida White House

CABINET MEETS ON ISSUE OF SOVIET JEWRY

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Cabinet discussed the Soviet Jewry question for almost an hour on Monday but Cabinet sources were reluctant to divulge details of the discussion. The policy appeared to be for the Government to keep a low profile on the Jackson Amendment dispute which presents Israel with the embarrassing dilemma of two of its staunchest friends at variance over an issue close to Israel's own heart.

Six Soviet immigrants ask meeting with Meir

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Six Soviet immigrants, all of whom have been imprisoned by the Soviet authorities for Zionist activities, appeared outside the Prime Minister's Office during the Cabinet meeting on Monday. They requested permission to address the Cabinet or to meet with Mrs. Meir in order to urge open support by the Israeli government for the Jackson Amendment. Their spokesman, Dov Sperling, was told by Eli Mizrahi, Deputy Director of the Prime Minister's Bureau, that their request to meet with Mrs. Meir would be considered.

The six sent a telegram to Senator Jackson stating that his campaign represented the only hope for Soviet Jewry. "We are certain you will not falter under pressure," they said.

Yesterday, several dozen young Soviet immigrants began a hunger strike at the Western Wall to protest the persecution of Soviet Jewry. They say they intend to fast until tonight, when a mass rally is planned at the Wall.

Begin olive branch to Ezer Weizman

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Herut Party Chairman Menachem Begin yesterday extended his hand in conciliation to former Executive Chairman Ezer Weizman.

He did so when reiterating his appeal to the former O.C. Air Force and former Transport Minister to renew an active role in Herut. Answering questions at a meeting with Bar-Ilan University students, the Herut leader trusted that Mr. Weizman's response would be a positive one.

Post critic back from drama talks in Yugoslavia

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Mendel Kobansky, Jerusalem Post drama critic, returned on Monday afternoon from Yugoslavia where he participated as the Israeli delegate in an international symposium of theatre criticism. He left Israel a week earlier after a ban on his participation was rescinded in a cable from the symposium's organizers.

Mr. Kobansky said his Yugoslav hosts received him warmly, and were obviously embarrassed by the incident. No political matters came up during the three-day symposium, although the delegates came from a large number of countries in the East and West, and there was also a delegate from Morocco.

BOY KILLED BY TRACTOR

A three-year-old boy from the village of Makr in Western Galilee was killed on Monday when a tractor ran over him as it was backing up.

Here for Independence Day concerts

Mehta lauds Israel cultural resources

TEL AVIV. — Maestro Zubin Mehta arrived here yesterday for two special concerts to be given by the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in celebration of Israel's 25th Independence Day.

The concerts, in Tel Aviv on May 7 and in Jerusalem on the following day, will feature Mahler's Second Symphony (with soprano Stella Richmond and contralto Maureen Forrester, as well as three massed choirs of the kibbutz movement) along with the world premiere of the I.P.O.-prize winning composition, Joseph Stuttschewsky's "Israel," and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

"You know," said Mr. Mehta as soon as he had alighted at Lod, "it's a pity that the world's image of Israel on Independence Day, as officially publicized outside the country, is exclusively devoted to the absorption of immigrants and to military matters, with absolutely no mention of Israel's rich cultural resources like the great I.P.O. or Israel's ballet companies."

"Now, we at the Israel Philharmonic, to give just one example out of many, are preparing an outstanding cultural and musical event for the occasion, which the Israel Government has not publicized at all. We are doing the Mahler Second because of the great spiritual fulfillment it gives to listeners. It speaks of the great spiritual-philosophic-humanistic resurrection of all mankind, and thus, to me, is far more appropriate to the celebration of Israel's independence than any other composition (except perhaps Beethoven's Ninth)."

Though still exhausted from the long flight, Maestro Mehta's excitement was obvious: "I had to cancel four appearances in Los Angeles so that I could be here for these concerts, but of course I could not think of doing anything else. By the way, the Mahler Second will be sung in Hebrew. We have truly first-rate soloists. Maureen Forrester, of course, needs no introduction. She is one of the world's greatest singers. And, happily, for the Engineers strike off, journalists call stoppage

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — While the strike of engineers and technicians set for today was called off yesterday, a journalists' warning strike has been called for next Wednesday, to be followed by a general strike a week later.

The National Union of Journalists yesterday informed all members that a warning strike will take place on May 9 if the wage agreement is not signed by then. The next step will be a general strike from the following Tuesday, May 15. Any newspaper wishing to sign a separate agreement is invited to do so before the night of Saturday, May 12.

The engineers' union secretariat yesterday decided to put off its general strike set for this morning after endorsing an agreement reached on Monday afternoon with the Government through Histadrut mediation. The meeting, chaired by Histadrut trade union chief Uriel Abrahamowitz, ended successfully after civil service commissioner Ya'acov Nitzan announced acceptance of Histadrut rulings. The commission agreed to cancel its original decision to stop paying extra emoluments to engineers according to their university degrees.

Meanwhile, it was announced on Monday that building workers' wages have gone up by seven per cent. The new agreement with contractors for 1973/4 provides a daily basic wage scale ranging from IL25.7 to IL49.8, plus increased social welfare benefits.

Cyprus moves to stop future terror attacks

By DAVID LANDAU

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

The Cyprus Government is taking steps to ensure that Arab terrorists attacks on Israeli personnel and property on the island do not recur.

The dual attack on April 10 on the Israeli ambassador's home and on an Israeli plane at Nicosia airport served warning that the tacit agreement whereby the terrorists had previously avoided Cyprus as a theatre for their operations is no longer valid. The Cyprus Government is therefore not treating the April attack as an isolated incident, but as a possible precursor of more violence.

This assessment emerged in discussions this week between Israel's ambassador to Cyprus, Rahamin Timor, who ends 10 days home leave today, and top Foreign Ministry officials.

Seven of the nine terrorists involved in the two attacks were captured and are still held in Cyprus. One other was shot dead during the attacks, and a ninth escaped. The trial of the eight has been set for May 15. Israel is hoping that the terrorists will draw convictions and severe punishments.

Mr. Timor reported that the Cypriot authorities were doing their best to protect Israelis on the island. Security had been stepped up at ports and airfields, and a number of Arabs had been barred entry.

Mr. Timor himself and the rest of the embassy staff and their families have resumed their normal lives, with children attending school as usual. Mr. and Mrs. Timor will be holding an Independence Day reception in their home, which was only slightly damaged in the terrorist attack.

Israeli observers feel that the April 10 attack sent a shock wave through Cyprus government circles and public opinion, resulting in a loss of prestige for the Arabs. Cypriots were offended that the Arab terrorists had not respected the country's sovereignty — despite their promises to do so and despite the fact that the Arabs themselves have always seen Cyprus as a pro-Arab state.

The reports that local insurgents are cooperating with the Arab terrorists have received no official corroboration so far.

Authoritative sources in Jerusalem have firmly scotched the reports that Israeli and Cypriot security services were tipped off in advance of the April 10 attack.

The Cypriot policeman gravely wounded in the attack on the ambassador's residence is expected to make a full recovery. Prof. Henry Romanoff of Hadassah Hospital, whom Mr. Timor requested to examine the patient, found that he would probably regain full use of his legs. It had earlier been feared that he would be paralyzed from the waist down.

May Day marked by rallies, parades, picnics, excursions

Jerusalem Post Staff

May Day was marked by processions, rallies and meetings and picnics and excursions.

Tel Aviv's main streets were packed with crowds and a holiday atmosphere prevailed. An estimated 2,000 people stood in Dizengoff Circle to hear Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon assure them that "the power of organized labour will yet create an egalitarian society in Israel."

Even the biggest demonstration, of youth movements, which was dominated by the blue shirts of Hashomer Hatzair, presented a contrast between the slogans they marched to — "Ben-Aharon to power" and "What's good for the worker is good for Israel," and the holiday mood of the participants.

The first procession was of the leftist opposition parties, organized jointly by Maki, Haolam Hazeh and Shach. When Rakah, the New Communist list, held its rally, with Maki group, in the Circle, a small group of youngsters tried to disrupt it until stopped by the police. Some supporters of Rakah held a May Day rally last night in the town came next, the demonstration differing from the others by black flags together with the red ones.

At an eve of May 1 address at Kibbutz Lohamei Hagetta'ot in the Galilee, Mr. Ben-Aharon addressed 8,000 Jewish and Arab workers gathered in the kibbutz's amphitheatre.

In the Greater Haifa area, which per square kilometre has the highest Histadrut membership concentration in the country, some 45,000 people took part in various May Day events. Well over 5,000 persons went on excursions organized by the Labour Council and 2,000 port workers went on a picnic.

In Jerusalem, thousands of Histadrut members took part in May Day celebrations that began on Monday night with a festive plenum meeting of the local Labour Council. During the day yesterday, hundreds of workers went on tours or ganized by the Council, and there was a gala party at the Tirat Bat-Pan Hotel for youth. In Nazareth, 2,500 members and supporters of Rakah held a May Day rally last night in the town centre.

the supply-demand forces will equal each other if industry and industrial research develop at the pace envisioned by the planning authority.

On the subject of ecology, the five-year-plan cites a German study that says the Mediterranean Sea will "die" in about 20 years from now "unless immediate steps are taken to improve the environment and arrest the pollution there."

The authority also refers to a study by Dr. D. Hillel, associate professor of soil physics at the Hebrew University. He warns that the continued high concentration of nitrates in Tel Aviv's drinking water supply may eventually render it unfit for human consumption.

The concentration of nitrates at present is approaching the maximum recommended safety point of 45
mg. per litre, due mainly to the pollution by fertilizers.

The Economic Planning Authority says it has no estimate of what it would cost to limit this type of pollution.

As for pollution by industrial wastes, the authority believes industry will spend between IL100m.
and IL200m. to fight this scourge.
Another IL270m. will be spent by public authorities to battle water pollution caused by untreated sewage flowing into water sources.

In the field of health services,
the report says that by 1978 there should be 28,000 hospital beds for the country's 3,600,000 more than present. Of the new beds, 1,800 will be for the mentally ill and 1,270 for persons suffering chronic illness.

Space will also be made available
in various institutions for an additional 3,360 handicapped children, 2,300 elderly people and 30,000 preschool children of working mothers.

This means that by 1978 the annual expenditure for treatment and rehabilitation will reach approximately IL473m. compared with an estimated IL185m. this year and IL141m. in 1972.

The five-year plan now goes to the Ministerial Economic Committee where it will be considered in detail.

look into the problems surrounding the L.N.O.

This announcement climaxes many years' search for a solution to the L.N.O.'s problems. After several committees had tried to find an answer to the Opera's financial problems, the "L.N.O." commission was appointed in 1962. Its recommendations were not followed up, and the situation worsened. Then,
the "Guri" Commission in 1966 tried its luck, to no avail. Finally, the present Minister of Education appointed the "Freier" Commission in 1971. Its findings were submitted to the Minister in 1972.

The Minister's announcement of his solution to the seemingly unsolvable problems besetting the National Opera, should be greeted with satisfaction. Although the official announcement did not mention whether the Israel Chamber Ensemble was consulted prior to the decision, it can be assumed that the step was not taken without sounding the opinion of Gary Bertini, the Ensemble's musical director, and also its public board on the fusion of the two bodies. It may also be assumed that this time, energetic measures will be taken to bring about a radical change in existing conditions in the financial and artistic situation of the two institutions each of which has for years contributed to the country's musical activities to the best of its ability.

ited by REISS-COHEN in Savoyon have more than doubled their dollar value
over the last two years.

Not only for the Rich
Whereas a unique work of art, like an Oil
or a Water Colour by Picasso, is well beyond the price-range most people can afford, an original print costs much less,
and is within the means of a large section of our population. Works by Matisse, exhibited in Savoyon, start from IL 4,000. There are works by Picasso for as little as IL 2,500; by Chagall from IL 1,000, and by Dali from IL 1,000.
Average prices are no more than prices
asked for paintings by only moderately successful local artists.

The value of the original prints is determined by the most recent prices

Geothermal energy to be under Development Ministry control

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Potential investors in this country's geothermal energy resources
— if such resources exist — will have to negotiate each contract separately with the Ministry of Development, until appropriate legislation is passed — which may take years.

(Geothermal energy is the energy derived from underground steam or hot water, which surfaces naturally in the form of geysers and thermal springs.)

The Cabinet decided on Monday
that the Development Minister would be responsible for geothermal energy, but would have to seek the approval of the Ministerial Economic Committee, before he concluded any deals to exploit the energy with entrepreneurs.

A handful of very general enquiries have been made by economic interests, to discover what conditions the Government would lay down in matter such as royalties, exploration licences, and periods of leases.

The Development Minister will apparently determine contractual conditions according to the principles of the State Properties Law.
No specific law exists, like the Oil Law, to help determine the relationship between the Government, as owner of the natural geothermal resources, and the concessionaire who exploits them.

Countries like the U.S., Iceland
and New Zealand have recently stepped up their exploitation of geothermal energy resources, and have introduced special legislation covering terms of exploitation.

Kidron appointed director-general of Foreign Ministry

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Mr. Avraham Kidron has been formally appointed director-general of the Foreign Ministry. His appointment was recommended by Foreign Minister Abba Eban and approved by the Cabinet on Sunday.

Mr. Kidron, 54, has been serving as acting director-general since his predecessor, Mordechai Gazit, left the Ministry to become director-general of the Prime Minister's office
in March.

Mr. Kidron has served as Minister in Yugoslavia and Ambassador to the Philippines. For some time he headed the Ministry's research department. In recent years he has been deputy director-general in charge of administration.

Mr. Kidron appointed Ephraim Evron as his deputy, and Yoel Ar-non as assistant director-general in charge of administration.

Mrs. Meir, Eban at funeral of Shmuel Benzur

Prime Minister Golda Meir, Foreign Minister Abba Eban and Police Minister Shlomo Hillel, on Monday headed the mourners who attended the funeral of Shmuel Benzur, Inspector-General of the Foreign Service and one of the founding members of the Foreign Ministry.

On the way from Sanhedria to the Har Hameinut cemetery, the funeral cortege stopped at the Foreign Ministry, where hundreds of Ministry staff members paid their last tribute to the deceased.

Speaking at the graveside, Mr.
Eban singled out Benzur's unique personality; he always served as an example to his colleagues by his unassuming and modest manner,
meanwhile, contributing his valued advice to the work of the Foreign Service from its inception. Benzur's son, Eytan, recited the Kaddish.

Gov't hands over 72 Wakf properties

By YOEL DAR
Jerusalem Post Reporter

ACRE — The Prime Minister's Adviser on Arab Affairs, Shmuel To-ledano, yesterday handed over 72 properties belonging to the Moslem Wakf — religious endowment — in this town to a board of Moslem public trustees.

The move followed a Government decision to release the multi-million Moslem Wakf property, which has been controlled by the Custodian of Absentees' property since 1948.
Properties being restored to Moslem boards at this stage are located in Acre, Haifa, Jaffa, Lod and Ramle.
Certain property in villages will not be released yet, although their revenues would be turned over to local Moslem communities.

The property handed over yesterday in Acre included two khans (ancient inns), land, shops, houses and a cinema. Their aggregate value is said to run into millions of pounds and current income from them into six figures.

The transfer ceremony took place at the El Jazzar mosque and was attended by representatives of the Land Administration and the Ministry for Religious Affairs.

Mr. Toledano explained that Wakf property consisted of two types:
one of which the Government Custodian had made no use, and the other which had been leased out for 99-year periods, among them land now built upon, for which the Wakf would be recorded as the owner and revenue from which would be turned over to the Moslem boards of trustees.

The Kadi of Acre, Sheikh Mohammed Hubeisli, said he welcomed the new development as a step toward the eventual release of all Wakf property, in villages as well as towns.

Sephardis want more names for T.A. Chief Rabbi

By SARAH HONIG

TEL AVIV. — A delegation of local Sephardi leaders plan to meet with the country's two Chief Rabbis and with Sephardi Knesset
Members to urge them to approve the nomination of all six rabbis who have declared themselves candidates for the post of the city's Sephardi Chief Rabbi.

The delegates, who are members of all the political parties represented on the city council, say that their aim is to ensure democratic elections by making sure that there is more than one candidate for the post. So far, there actually appears to be no one in the running. The Chief Rabbinate Council only granted approval to Rabbi David Halevi of Rishon Lezion, denying it to the other five candidates.
Finding himself the only candidate,
Rabbi Halevi decided to withdraw.

On the Ashkenazi side there are two candidates. Tel Aviv southern neighbourhood Rabbi Yedidia Frenkel, and head of the Regional Rabbinical Council, Rabbi Yitzhak
Koltitz of Bnei Brak. The elections are scheduled for May 27.

The three remaining members of this group — Mahmud Sakir, 35,

of Nazareth; and Mahmud Masrawa, 24, of Bak'a al-Gharbiya — will

Haifa council rushes through 112 items in 60 minutes

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The city council met on Monday for its monthly afternoon session, and rushed through 112 items on the agenda for formal approval in one hour. The reason for the unusual speed? The session opened an hour before the Labour Council started its May 1 festivities.

"If you hurry too much you will get there (to the Labour Council function) too early," Gahal faction
leader Mordechai Tikotzki joked.

The main items were the extension of the deadline for the advance payment of the annual general tax, reduced by a 7.5 per cent bonus, to May 15, and the Munici-pality's projected construction of permanent exhibition grounds on the southern fringe of the city, near the coast.

The session was marred by an exchange between Dr. Dov Laufer (Gahal) and Aharon Shapira (Labour) over the manner in which last Sunday's Remembrance Day
for the Nazi victims was observed by the Municipality. In a letter to the Mayor, Dr. Laufer said that instead of sending a deputy mayor to the ceremony, it had only been represented by a councillor. Invitations were sent out only a few days before the function and were printed on small sheets of flimsy paper.

Worst of all, Dr. Laufer charged, the Haifa Labour Council had been invited to co-sponsor the function, together with the Government Information Centre. This was an affront to the memory of the dead and he had sent the invitation back in disgust. (Dr. Laufer is himself a survivor of the Holocaust.)

ILL,000 fine for threatening reporter

TEL AVIV. — Shlomo Danoch,
who was acquitted in the Magistrates' Court of charges of threatening "Ha'aretz" reporter Ran Kislev with violence, was convicted on the same charge by the District Court here Monday. He was fined IL1,000.

The District Court granted the prosecution's appeal against the lower court's decision by a vote of two to one. Danoch had been charged with threatening Mr. Kislev after the reporter mentioned him in a series of articles he wrote on organized crime in Israel, in April, 1971. Mr. Kislev wrote that Danoch was connected with the murder of gambling-club owner Aharon Elmaliah.

Danoch's attorney said he would appeal. (Him)

16 charged with demonstrating at spy trial

HAIFA. — Sixteen youngsters who were arrested for demonstrating during a hearing of the Arab-Jewish spy trial here were indicted for trial and then released on bond yesterday.

Their trial was set for the middle of the month.

The police said in Magistrates' Court yesterday that the youngsters were accused of holding an illegal demonstration outside the District Courthouse on April 25, with intent to disrupt the trial that was going on inside.

In the spy trial, hearings resumed yesterday for the third group of suspects. (There are 33 suspects in all, nearly half of whom have already been convicted and sentenced.) Of the eight men in this group, four were convicted on the basis of their own confessions at the last session of the trial. A fifth, Yasser Jattma's, 23, of Jaffa, a village near Nazareth, confessed yesterday, and was convicted of membership in an illegal organization and covering up a security offence
of which he had knowledge.

The three remaining members of
this group — Mahmud Sakir, 35,
of Nazareth; Osama Wakied, 18,

one of six "Outstanding Works Committees — 1973" to receive cash prizes from the Jerusalem Labour Council at Beit Hahistadrut yesterday, May Day.

The other winners of the prize
were the works committees of King David Hotel's service personnel, the central office of the Housing Ministry, J. and H. Fefferman Co. Ltd.
(building contractors), Shaa'ara
Ezekiel Hospital and Redmond-Amcor.
The prizes ranged from IL250 to IL750, and each committee member was also awarded a copy of Abba Eban's "My Country," published by "Davar" (a Histadrut publishing house).

The prizes were awarded for good labour relations, adhering to labour agreements, work safety, advancement of workers and cultural activities.

tells Hanoi: Keep ease-fire or face a renewed war

A high U.S. official said Hanoi must maintain the Vietnam-U.S. agreement or face a renewed war. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State William Sullivan said before flying to Hanoi on Monday that the U.S. had with North Vietnam in Paris about the Vietnam-U.S. agreement.

U.S. officials at Orly airport said they did not know what the North Vietnamese would do. They said they think the North Vietnamese are going to have a choice to make. They are going to have to decide whether they want to keep the agreement or whether they want to start a new war.

Vietnamese delegates, who flew home, also said they did not think the agreement was going to be renewed. They said they thought the agreement was going to be renewed, but they did not think it was going to be renewed.

French in mood for showdown LABOUR CRISIS LOOMS AS GAULLISTS DIG IN

By JACK MAURICE
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

PARIS. — MILLIONS of abandoned cars rusting on scrap heaps all over France. Factory workers, after deciding to go on holiday for an indefinite period, pedal off into the countryside on their bicycles. Apartment owners and tenants throw their keys out of the windows and proclaim open house to total strangers. The few cars left on the roads are stranded because the petrol pumps have dried up: the refinery workers are busy studying music. Vegetables are grown on street pavements because they can be watered without effort from third storey windows. Unrestrained sexual intercourse is encouraged in parks and other public places on the theory that the libido generates potential energy. Bank notes become collectors' items because nobody uses money any more.

This utopian image of what France might be like if the entire nation downed tools simultaneously is the theme of a current box-office success entitled "The Year 01." This week, as the strike at the state-owned Renault automobile company, the biggest firm in France, ground into its fifth week, many Frenchmen were beginning to wonder whether their technological revolution is about to be supplanted by a non-consumer society of the type they can behold at their local cinema.

Renault paralysed

Paralysis set in at Renault when 573 shop men walked out in protest against their working conditions. The strikers claimed that although they were right at the bottom of the factory's pay ladder their jobs warranted payment at the rates offered to skilled workers. Almost the entire body shop staff are immigrants who send the bulk of their monthly pay cheques to their families in North Africa, Portugal and Spain. Egged on by left-wing militants — the trade unions jumped on the band wagon only when they realized it was rolling ahead relentlessly out of their control — the foreigners discovered they were indispensable to France's industrial development, not because they possess any unique technical skills but because they accept jobs which Frenchmen refuse to handle.

The body shop stoppage at the main Renault plant in Billancourt, a Paris suburb, threw thousands of workers in other workshops out of work. But when the original small band of strikers obtained satisfaction and went back to their jobs, their French colleagues refused to follow suit.

They complained that the management had agreed to pay them only half their usual rate for the hours they had lost during the strike. The discontent spread like wildfire to other Renault factories on the outskirts of Paris and in Normandy and triggered stoppages at the Peugeot and Safran motor companies. The speed with which a walk-out by a few unskilled immigrants had hamstrung the French automobile industry provoked this querulous complaint from "Le Figaro": "What are we going to do if the underdeveloped countries give orders in our factories?"

Better salaries

This criticism missed the point of the unrest at Renault which is imperiling the jobs of its 93,000 employees. The body shop strike would not have aroused official union support if the mass of French workers were not in the mood for a showdown with management. Disappointed by the Gaullists' general election victory in May, the workers are convinced that unless they take to the streets they cannot expect to obtain any improvement in their salaries and working conditions. Symptomatic of the impetus toward a united labour front is the close cooperation between Georges Seguy's monolithic Communist Trade Union, the C.G.T., and its rival, the extreme left-wing C.F.D.T., which is headed by Edmond Maire, in marshalling their forces for a joint confrontation with the employers.

Does this mean that May 1973 will be a carbon copy of May 1968? A nation-wide general strike on the scale of the massive stoppage which almost toppled General de Gaulle five years ago seems unlikely. More probable is what the French are calling a "magno strike" — borrowing from Italy the terminology for the rash of "unwilling strikes" which burst out unpredictably at key points in the economy and cause havoc, as at Renault, quite disproportionate to the number of strikers involved.

Employers are restless too. The C.N.F.E., the French employers' organization, is as bitter as the trade unions about spiralling prices which threaten to send costs up by another six percent this year. The C.N.F.E. has just issued a white paper demanding the end of the price freeze which it has signed with the treasury. This document points out that economic offences are more heavily penalized in France than crimes of violence. For instance, if you slaughter a cow or a lamb outside a municipal abattoir you can be jailed for up to four years and fined $30,000. But for accidental homicide the maximum penalty is two years in prison and a $400 fine. The employers say they are baffled by a mass of price decrees which have embraced 25,931 items over the past 21 years.

The mood of the French, whether they are workers, employers or students, is summed up in the oft repeated outburst of exasperation: "ras le bol" (look-a-bol). The ras le bol is a microcosm of the wide-spread dissatisfaction with the existing social and economic system. Gédé, a cartoonist from the underground paper "Charlie Hebdo", who wrote the scenario, says: "People want to stop everything and start from zero. We can change it all if every body takes a step sideways. Instead of walking ahead, the rifles would fall from the hands of the recruits, there would be no passengers waiting at the doors when the metro trains pull into the stations. There would be no violence, no police."

France is unlikely to see the year 01 dawn in May. But, unless the country's rulers show more resilience than they have since the departure of de Gaulle, something is going to crack in the national fabric.

Israel plays crucial role for American Jewry

THE 25th anniversary of the State of Israel provides a fit opportunity to consider the impact of the State on Jews abroad. Devotion to Israel has played a crucial role over the past generation in providing a focus and goal for Jewish aspirations and activities, filling the voids created by setbacks in matters of faith and other aspects of Jewish identity. Without the State, the process of assimilation, and in some cases disintegration, would by now have reached highly alarming proportions. There are small communities throughout the world for whom Israel is the raison d'être while the part played by Israel in keeping alive and fanning the Jewish spark in Soviet Russia is well known.

Writing in "Dispersion and Unity," the journal published by the World Zionist Organization, Prof. Charles S. Liebman of Bar-Ilan University looks at the role played by Israel in Jewish life in the U.S. He cites various indications to show that 1967 was a turning-point. Surveys made before that date showed an interest but a lack of intensive identification with Israel. After that period, the community has been engaged in concern for Israel.

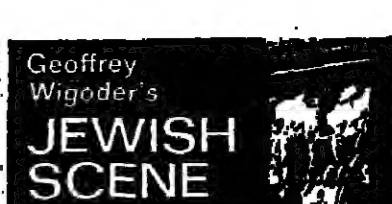

Another indicator is the growth of financial contributions. U.S.A. contributions rose from $64m. in 1966 to $240m. at the peak of 1967 and are still over $200m. Bond sales rose from $76m. in 1966 to $176m. in 1970.

Israel's flag

Even more significant is Israel's symbolic importance to American Jews. The Israeli flag, the national anthem and art objects have assumed quasi-religious status. Although only a small proportion of the average American Jew's week is devoted to Jewish matters, an increasingly large segment of this "Jewish time" is devoted to Israel — at meetings, in conversations, in reading and viewing, and in travel to Israel. Jewish educational institutions also show increasing concern for Israel in their curricula. Jewish organizations spend an increasing part of their budget on Israel-centred programmes, as the best way to hold the interest of their members. (It may be noted that the decline of traditional Zionist societies, except among the women, has been more than replaced by the "Zionization" of all forms of activity. The old Zionist slogan of "conquest of the community" has been completely attained (but not through the accepted Zionist framework). In fact, Israel is so central that any organization in the community is more likely to elect a leader who has intermarried than one who is opposed to Israel. The bitterness against the New Left was not so much its threat to certain Jewish family and community values as its anti-Israel stance.)

On the other hand, the ideological role of Israel must be seen in full perspective and must not be exaggerated. He reports the results of a questionnaire circulated among religious and communal leaders, which indicated the widespread feeling that while there must be warm relations between U.S. Jews and Israel, the centre of American Jewish life must be American Judaism rather than a culture that will emanate from Israel. The only significant disagreement came from Orthodox and secular circles; Conservative and Reform leadership, rabbinic and lay, overwhelmingly concurred. So that the thrust is not only to deny Akiyah as a pre-eminent Jewish value and not to see Israel as the ideological and cultural centre. Israel's central importance, according to Liebman, stems from various factors — but is not ideological.

For many Jews, Israel is the only cause left. Other activities involving Jewish identity fall off in the 1960s — such as the fight against social injustices and for civil rights, the fight against discrimination, and there was also a drop in positive manifestations including the so-called synagogue revival of the post-war period.

Geoffrey Wigoder's JEWISH SCENE

feeling that while there must be warm relations between U.S. Jews and Israel, the centre of American Jewish life must be American Judaism rather than a culture that will emanate from Israel. The only significant disagreement came from Orthodox and secular circles; Conservative and Reform leadership, rabbinic and lay, overwhelmingly concurred. So that the thrust is not only to deny Akiyah as a pre-eminent Jewish value and not to see Israel as the ideological and cultural centre. Israel's central importance, according to Liebman, stems from various factors — but is not ideological.

For many Jews, Israel is the only cause left. Other activities involving Jewish identity fall off in the 1960s — such as the fight against social injustices and for civil rights, the fight against discrimination, and there was also a drop in positive manifestations including the so-called synagogue revival of the post-war period.

Israel has a special appeal for the Jew who has no religious outlet. Israel is the carrier of a secular Jewish culture that has virtually disappeared in the U.S. And so Israel can attract the declining Socialist elements and also some of the radical Jewish youth, despite their rejection of the Jewish "Teligion." (The fight for Soviet Jewry has provided a similar cause but not on such an extensive and far-reaching scale.)

Within a religious context, Israel has become a central theme. It is featured in the service and the synagogue school. The Yom Kippur service is an occasion for selling Israel Bonds! The interruption of this most solemn of services for the sale of Bonds is regarded perfectly in place (which illustrates not only an attitude to Israel but also an attitude to Yom Kippur). Other words, Israel has not yet become the focus of Jewish religious life but has become the content of expression of Jewish religious life. Support for Israel has become a symbol of one's Jewish identity. There is nothing to do with Zionism with a national Jewish self-identity, or even with knowing about Israel. It is also wholly patible with being a good American. This is "the Jewish thing" — this is brought home by the media constantly and in ways.

Ancient customs

Israel has replaced the hot fire of the World War, the hot fire of Eastern Europe. To some American Jews, especially the native-born, the concept has little or no meaning. But to others, including some in the U.S., it remains a symbol (as it does among other groups who maintain some connection with the Jewish past). At least emotional, with the specific countries, for many Jews, the term is where one's Jewish identity is rooted. For this Jew, Israel is expected to keep up ancient customs and folkways.

In conclusion, Liebman notes that it is a sign of the extent of assimilation that as Jews can be so open and confident in their attitude to Israel. Of course the political line between Israel and the U.S. is not always clear. After the Sinai Campaign, the U.S. stood up for Israel over Black Power and still gains have legitimized ethnic self-interest all along the line. The situation could be modified in certain circumstances — but this anniversary, there can be no doubting the profound impact the State of Israel on American Jews, as on the Jews of the world.

Painfully disappointing duo

Due von Wrochem (Tel Aviv, Museum, April 24). Bach's Sonata No. 4 for Viola solo in G minor. Rummel Sonata in D for Viola. For Viola and Piano. Dvorak's Four Waltzes for Piano. Bach's Sonata No. 2 for Viola. For Viola. Dvorak's Sonata for Viola and Piano.

THE Duo von Wrochem from Germany, features Ulf von Wrochem, violin, and Johann von Wrochem, piano. The first part was particularly disappointing. The Bach Sonata No. 2 (Sonata No. 4 written originally in G minor, but played on the Viola in D) offered no convincing phrasing, no agreeable tone nor was there an impressive culmination in the chorale.

The performance of the Hummel sonata was slightly more enjoyable but the music had really nothing to offer. Dvorak's Waltzes for piano, which indicated the widespread

The second part of the o dedicated to contemporary brought a considerable change in style, atmosphere and apt. Both seemed much more in the hands of the duo. Dvorak's challenging Sonata, a striking example of dox serialism, was a fruitful for the pianist, who attended countless details with care and attitude.

An even better achievement was the Duo Diagrams for viola and piano, a work of subtle interest, although slightly lacking in length, the duo posed by its musical content duo convincingly revealed the determined and harsh language its own competence in pre contemporary music.

INDEPENDENCE DAY 5733 EVENTS COMMITTEE

TRAFFIC SUPERVISION DEPT.

ISRAELI POLICE

ON INDEPENDENCE DAY 5733 —

WE SHALL GO UP TO JERUSALEM IN JOY AND SAFETY

To the Citizens of Israel and visitors, intending to go up to Jerusalem to watch the Independence Day Parade

GREETINGS!

More than a quarter of a million people, Israeli citizens and tourists, are expected to watch the I.D.F. parade marking the 25th year of the State of Israel to be held in Jerusalem on Monday, May 7, 1973. The parade will demonstrate the strength of the State on its semi-jubilee. Sixty thousand will watch the parade from stands put up for the invited, and 200 thousand will be ranged along the route. The route, which will be 7 km. long, will be as follows:

Entry to Jerusalem from Sho'at, Derech Shalom, the bypass road near the Ambassador Hotel, St. George, Kikar Piked Hammer, Rehov Heli Hahamania, Rehov Hanev'im, Damascus Gate Square, Derech Hahamania, Rehov Heli Hahamania, Kikar Zion, Rehov Ben Yehuda, Kikar George Aviv, Kikar Tzafat, Rehov Keren Hayasod, Kikar Hahamania, Rehov David Hamelech.

The parade will start at 10 a.m., and terminate at the finish line in Rehov David Hamelech at 12.45 p.m. In order to ensure the orderly movement of the tens of thousands of people who will arrive in Jerusalem from all parts of Israel, special traffic arrangements have been laid down. Only by strict adherence to these arrangements will it be possible to ensure that those who come to celebrate the holiday, will be able to come up to Jerusalem and return in joy and safety.

These traffic arrangements apply to the general public — and to those invited to watch from the stands. TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC — About 125,000 people will travel to, and return from, Jerusalem by public transport: buses, taxis, and trains.

• BUSES — A special, frequent service, at all hours of the day and night, will run from Sunday, May 6 to 4 a.m. on Monday, May 7. These buses will start at various points throughout Israel, but mainly from the Greater Tel Aviv area, starting from midnight. The buses will take passengers directly to the parade route. The service will restart, to return people to their homes. Full details appear on Eged notices.

• TAXIS — These will run up to 5 a.m. on the day of the parade, and again immediately after the parade finishes. Taxis which are not Jerusalem-based will be centred on two points: one near the Museum and the second at the University stadium. These taxis will set out from these centres for the return journey.

• TRAINS — Israel Railways will run frequent services, starting in the evening of May 6. These trains will run from all parts of Israel, but mainly from Tel Aviv. The services will recommence after the end of the parade. Full details in Israel Railways' special notices.

• INSIDE JERUSALEM — Bus and taxi services to the parade route will be operated. These services will run from the night before the parade, until all the spectators are dispersed.

• TO INVITEES — The 80,000 people who have been invited — bereaved families, disabled ex-I.D.F. members, new immigrants, tourists, public personalities, I.D.F. commanders, military attachés, and other guests — will arrive in Jerusalem in 1,100 buses and 7,000 private cars. These will follow prescribed routes, arranged so that they will not interfere with the movement of the general public. They will be taken to the stands on which they have a reserved place, at the most convenient time possible, and with maximum possible convenience.

Every person will have received a "guest's envelope" containing his ticket, routing details, general instructions, and the programme of the parade. Careful attention to these instructions is an essential condition for the successful reception and subsequent dispersal of the visitors. These arrangements cover the return of the invitees direct to their own neighbourhoods, and do not permit entry to the city of Jerusalem.

with special signs, the colour and form of which will correspond to the various parking stickers.

SIGN COLOURS

• YELLOW — to be followed by drivers of cars with no parking stickers.

• PINK AND LIGHT BLUE — to be followed by those with parking stickers.

• GREEN — to be followed by buses bringing invitees, and travelling on exclusive routes, designed not to interfere with other traffic.

SHAPE OF PINK, LIGHT BLUE AND GREEN SIGNS

• ROUND — for those with round parking stickers, travelling to parking areas in the centre of the route.

• TRIANGULAR — for those with triangular parking stickers, travelling to parking areas in the centre of the route.

• RECTANGULAR — for those with rectangular parking stickers, travelling to parking areas at the south end of the route.

In addition to colour (pink, light blue or green) and shape (round, triangular or rectangular) the signs will bear a number, referring to the parking area which will be reached if the route is followed exactly to its end.

At the beginning of the route — follow the colour

In the continuation of the route — follow the shape

Near the parking area — follow the number on the sign. More detailed instructions are given in the "guest's envelopes".

TRAFFIC LIMITATIONS — will apply, in order to ensure order, convenient streaming of traffic to Jerusalem on the day of the parade, and in view of the limited parking space in Jerusalem. These will come into effect at noon on Sunday, May 6, and continue until the afternoon of the day of the parade, May 7. Full details will be published in notices issued by the Traffic Supervision Dept. and the Israeli Police, and printed in the press, posted on notice boards, and in information sheets to be found at all police stations.

The main points of these limitations are as follows:

After noon on Sunday, May 6, public transport vehicles (buses and taxis) will be permitted to travel on roads leading to Jerusalem. Vehicles of Jerusalem residents, holders of parking stickers and duty vehicles, security service vehicles, doctors' cars, and diplomatic cars — will also be permitted. No other vehicles will be permitted on these roads.

On the day of the parade, May 7, from 4 a.m. to 3 p.m., the limitations will be broadened to include buses and taxis, so that only duty vehicles and parking sticker holders will be permitted to travel on roads leading to Jerusalem. However, from 10 a.m. on May 7, it will be possible to travel to Jerusalem on the following routes:

a. Gedera, Be'em Junction, Sdot Micha, Netiv Hahamed-Hey Bar Giora, Ein Karem.

b. Jericho road.

At 3 p.m. on May 7 these arrangements will no longer apply and there will be no restrictions on traffic to and from Jerusalem.

EXIT FROM JERUSALEM — will be restricted only on the day of the parade, May 7, from 4 a.m. to 9.30 a.m., with the exception of two roads which will be kept open:

a. Ein Karem, Bar Giora, Netiv Hahamed-Hey, Sdot Micha.

b. Jericho road.

The information sections in the following police stations will issue permits for travel during the application of the above restrictions: for special urgent cases — Hahar, Beisan, Hatis, Netanya, Ramla, Ashdod, Beer-Sheva.

Independence Day 5733, the 25th anniversary of the State, will be a day of joy and pride. The I.D.F. parade in Jerusalem will be the main event of the celebrations. Let us all do what we can to ensure that the holiday spirit is not spoiled by lack of order and self-discipline.

If we all comply with the instructions — we shall all have a happy holiday.

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Two book publishing prizes were awarded at the Sixth Jerusalem International Book Fair last week. A German publisher, Belsar Verlag of Stuttgart, won the Israel Museum's International Art Book Prize for "Kafka and Prague" (Kafka and Prague). On Friday, Minister of Commerce and Industry Haim Bar-Lev presented awards at ceremonies for the "best-produced Israeli book" competition, sponsored by the Book and Printing Centre of the Israel Export Institute.

Five books shared first prize. They were: "The Fifth Gospel" (Messias Press); "Booths of Immigrants: A Parents and Cepboards & Tables and Chairs & Blessing the Gendies & Lions and Fish & Flies" (Massada Press); "Planning Jerusalem" (Weldensfeld and Nicholson Jerusalem); "Schliffen Methode" (Israel Programme for Scientific Translations) and "New Arithmetic for the Fifth Grade" (Dvir).

Half of Technion staff on strike

Post Reporter
A new wage agreement, which they have refused, their wages were actually lower than before.

The Technion spokesman termed the strike "unjustified." He said that the assistants' wages were a matter for national negotiations as they were part of the overall arrangements of all the universities — and the Technion could not deviate from the common agreement. He said the Technion had done what it could to improve their condition. For instance, it was now completing the construction of 100 low-rental apartments on the campus for the assistants who both teach and work for higher degrees.

The assistants rejected the "national" argument, and claimed that they could not be compared to their colleagues in other universities, because they were mostly qualified engineers who could command much higher wages in industry.

Officers again strike ships in Haifa

A'ACOV FRIEDLER, Jerusalem Post Reporter
The Merchant Marine Officers' Union declared a strike on Monday at noon, less than 24 hours after an ultimatum demanding that their claims be met.

The union refused to approach the strikers yesterday, taking the stand that giving in would only invite more strikes on other details. A company spokesman said they preferred to face a showdown.

In a strong reaction the Zim management announced that it was unable to continue its relationship with the Union on an ultimatum basis, with strike threats over every detail not immediately agreed on in negotiations.

Union secretary Captain Shmuel Zucker stated that they had restricted the strike to only three ships as a first step in order to limit the damage and give the companies a chance to accede to their demands during May Day, when the ships would have been idle anyway as the port did not work.

He claimed the companies were trying, by unfairly interpreting the agreement they had reached a fortnight ago, following the previous officers' strike, to negotiate some concessions. The companies, he said, were trying to change pay and work arrangements which had been in force for 10 years and were thus "reneging on their own signatures to the agreement."

The management of Zim, which is handling the negotiations on behalf of all the shipping companies, noted that the strike was the third within a short time and was called while negotiations were actually proceeding.

Kol urges Crusader tourism centre

ACRE — Tourism Minister Moshe Kol yesterday proposed the establishment of a Crusader tourism centre in Galilee as a joint project of Jewish and Druse settlements.

Speaking at Fasouta in Upper Galilee he offered his ministry's aid for regional tourism schemes. He was made freeman of the village, the first to be so honoured by a rural community.

Financially charged market

ET Closing Tuesday, May 1, 1973

— In what some of the most charged markets in the world opened yesterday, plunging deeply into the red, the Dow Jones average of 30 up more than 13 during the day's trading session. Dealers on the New York Stock Exchange outpaced advances towards the close.

Louis Abt of Granger Co. said that unless the President at his news conference, called for 10 a.m. this morning, had some strong measures on the economy, the market inevitably would plunge.

Rolls-Royce to stay British

LONDON (UPI). — The company making Rolls-Royce cars, those stately symbols of quiet elegance, will remain in British hands, bankers acting for the firm announced yesterday.

A spokesman for N.M. Rothschild and Sons, Ltd., said no foreign firms submitted tenders when Rolls-Royce Motors, Ltd., the highly profitable car division of the bankrupt Rolls-Royce group, went on sale to the highest bidder yesterday.

Automotive industry sources said American and other foreign firms apparently decided against bidding for the company because of a condition which would have prevented them from using the name "Rolls-Royce" in marketing the cars.

The announcement ended fears among wealthy Britons and the company's 5,000 employees that the famous firm would fall into foreign hands.

"Wonderful," exclaimed stockbroker John Dymock-Mansell from behind the wheel of his 210,000 Silver Shadow. "Rolls-Royce is as British as the monarch. The thought of Japanese, Americans or other foreigners taking over the firm was just too ghastly."

THE WINNING SIX numbers in the "lotto" draw are: 05, 06, 14, 18, 31 and 32, Mital Hapayis announced yesterday. The additional number (which Mital Hapayis adds) was 25.

Capitalist stock market feels effect of May 1

TEL AVIV. — The Stock Market, which is a capitalist institution, yesterday showed the absence of many customers who took a holiday to celebrate May 1. Turnover was 11.2m, of which 11.0m. was in the variables, and those shares which were traded fell in price, conforming to the trend of the last few sessions.
IDE Bank Holding	dropped 2 1/2 points to 258 with 120,000 shares traded. Bank Leumi remained unchanged. ILDC lost four points to 210 (70,000). ATA declined 2 1/2 points to 147 (24,000).
Israel Paper Mills	lost 11 points to 224, in spite of a slight rally in New York where the stock closed at 7 1/2.
Cold Storage	was a firm spot, with a gain of eight points to 440 (17,000), as was Unico, which rose 1 1/2 points to 89 (82,000). Jafara, which is not quoted on the stock market, a subsidiary of Cold Storage, declared a 200 per cent bonus, from which shareholders of Cold Storage, Lighterage and Pryon will eventually benefit.
Dollar-linked bonds	were slightly better, but bonds dealt in foreign currency were still on the decline.
Cost-of-living bonds	which rose recently, were almost at a standstill and the big demands were supplied with negligible rises. Bond turnover was 11.3m. worth.
The General Index of share prices	fell by 0.62 per cent to stand at 259.54.

Protection widened for exporters

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The Ministry of Commerce and Industry has widened the coverage it offers exporters through the Foreign Trade Risks Insurance Corporation.

The company, which insures shippers against losses resulting from political and commercial mishaps, now assumes liability from the moment the sales contract is signed, rather than from the date of shipment.

This new feature will protect many exporters who previously lost huge sums due to "collapsing orders." In these, an overseas customer would place a sizeable order with an Israel concern, and the latter would invest substantially in raw materials, tooling up and starting production. Then, without warning, the customer cancels the order. Under the new arrangement, the policy holder would be compensated for this loss.

Another change in the insurance is the waiting time for compensation — now cut from 12 months to six.

Citing the case of Israel businessmen who bought insurance and collected following Uganda's ouster of Israel interests last year, the Ministry's foreign trade chief, Adin Talbar, said: "This protection against loss is certainly one of the most important incentives the Government offers businessmen who want to sell abroad." He said payment of claims resulting from the Uganda action "wiped out our reserve fund four times over."

The Government-owned insurance company, founded in 1957, is now headed by Amior Kamir, who served as economic adviser to the late Prime Minister Levi Eshkol. Mr. Kamir told economic reporters in Jerusalem on Monday that the firm's insurance policies have taken on added importance recently.

Book Fair may be extended

By MOSHE KOHN
Jerusalem Post Literary Editor
The Sixth (biennial) Jerusalem International Book Fair closed on Monday evening, with the organizers and many of the exhibitors entertaining serious thoughts about making it an annual event or having it last longer than the present five days.

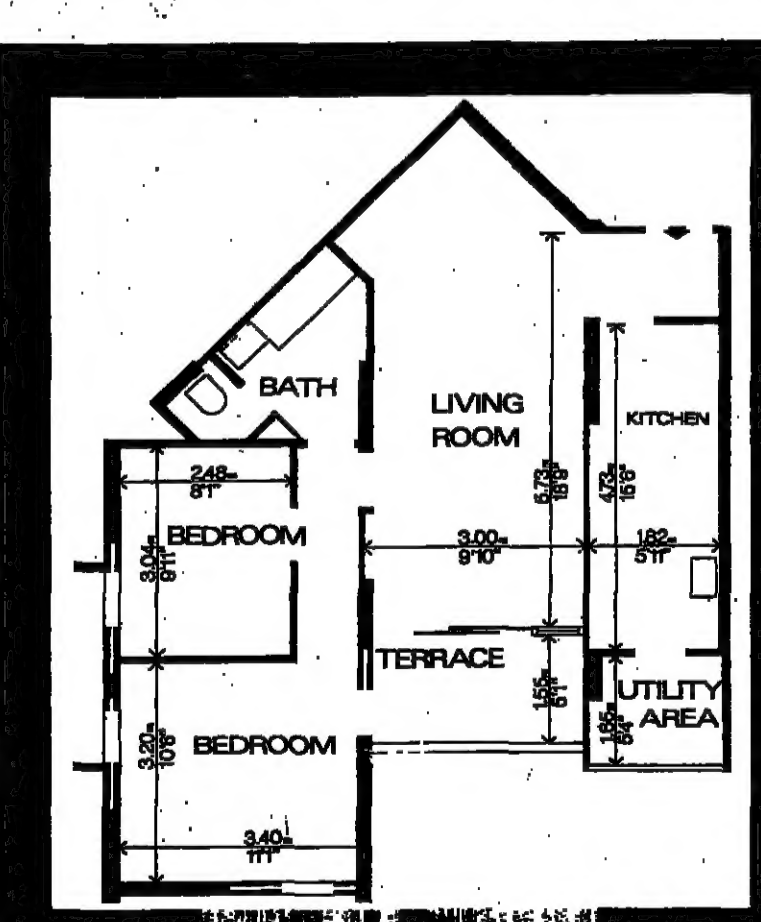

An estimated 60,000 persons paid to visit the Fair during the 4 1/2 hours that it was open to the public at Binyanei Ha'oma — more than half of them during five hours on Saturday night.

Mr. Roni Feinstein, Chairman of the Jerusalem Book Fair Permanent Committee and Director-General of the Jerusalem Municipality, told The Jerusalem Post that a decision about future fairs will be made in the coming weeks — as soon as the foreign exhibitors have returned the questionnaires in which they are asked their opinion about the Fair's format and duration.

Concerning a pre-Fair statement by a spokesman for the organizers that the present Fair was expected to surpass the annual Frankfurt Book Fair (and repeated in a Jerusalem Post leader last Thursday), it was explained that this had not been intended in any absolute way, but was meant to refer only to public attendance relative to population.

One reservation expressed about the Israel public's behaviour concerned several dozen attempts by members of the public to carry off books. Many of these attempts were stopped by vigilant stand attendants or by the guards at the exits.

Habimah presented the play "The Chairs," by this year's Jerusalem Prize laureate, Eugene Ionesco, at the Jerusalem Theatre on Monday night in the presence of the author and his wife. Before the curtain rose, Mayor Teddy Kollek presented the playwright with an inscribed Jerusalem Medalion. In a brief acceptance speech, Mr. Ionesco said he felt himself "an adopted child of Jerusalem" and would "be back here soon and often."

MAY DAY

DESPITE the traditional display of red flags, May Day has long since become a public holiday rather than an occasion to mark the class struggle between workers and "capitalists"; the leaders of the state, the Histadrut and the cooperatives which together employ so large a proportion of Israel's workers themselves constitute the labour movement, after all. There is no conflict of ideologies.

Histadrut Secretary-General Ben-Aharon, whose mood is becoming increasingly belligerent as the elections approach, could say nothing worse than that life is not yet ideal for the workers in Israel; even he would scarcely claim that it is ideal for the employer, either.

He called for a return to egalitarianism, and his audience cheered, though this principle is no longer as conspicuous a principle within the Histadrut itself as it once was. Even under Mr. Ben-Aharon's stronger rule in the organization the top grades of workers have advanced far more than those at the bottom, and the real gap between the haves and the have-nots today is not between workers and employers, but between the skilled and unskilled workers themselves. If we are to make a wish for May Day, it should be that those without skills should acquire them, and that those who cannot, shall also receive a wage on which they can support their families without recourse to welfare.

Despite the holiday atmosphere marches and parades were split along party lines. The workers of the world may wish to unite, but Israel's about does not march with the Communists, and these do not go together with the New Communists and Matspen, and the small group of Black Panthers were separate again.

The Panthers were led by Mr. Shalom Cohen, M.K., who broke away from Mr. Uri Avneri's Ha'olam Hazeh party. They chanted "Shalom Cohen to power" except for a few who slipped up and called instead for Menachem Begin, the Gahal leader, for whom most of them have voted in the past as the only available opposition.

There is said to be feeling in some Mapai quarters that Mr. Ben-Aharon's sharp and persistent criticism of Finance Minister Sapir's policies and methods may be taken too literally in some sections, and cost the Labour Party votes that perhaps need not have been lost.

We need not complain too much about the dissipation of forces. It may be simpler in Russia, where there was only one parade yesterday, directed by one party that publicly expresses one sole official view, while everybody may speculate quietly what the marchers are thinking. Officially at least, the mood was so sunny in Moscow yesterday that not only was the U.S. not attacked, but there was no mention even of the Middle East.

Dry Bones

ISRAEL PRESS

Jews in Arab lands

Ha'aretz (Non-party) writes on the fate of Jews in Arab lands: "Monday's appeal by the Knesset to parliaments and world opinion to campaign against the persecution of Iraqi Jewry is not wasted effort. It has already been proved that international action is efficacious on this issue. Seemingly, not only hatred and the desire to take revenge on the Jewish hostages remaining in Baghdad characterize the murderous deeds there. It transpires that the authorities wish to lay their hands on the property of dozens of Jewish families, as well as confiscate the vast communal properties. This would explain the elimination of entire families, not leaving a single heir to claim inheritance. This dark picture is also characteristic of the situation of Syrian Jewry. Israel must act by all means possible to rescue the suffering Iraqi and Syrian Jewish communities."

Ha'aretz (National Religious) writes: "The appeal voiced Monday by the Knesset testifies that Israel will not keep silent until the gates of Iraq are opened and the last of the Jews permitted to leave the country. We are determined to do everything to rescue Iraqi Jewry."

Omer (Histadrut) writes: "The Government of Israel should refrain from intervening in the controversy surrounding the Jackson Amendment. Any such move will have an adverse effect on crystallization of U.S. Senate support for the amendment, as well as harm Israel's relations with the White House, without benefiting Soviet Jewry. This political campaign must be conducted without the Israel government's participation."

Al Hanihmar (Mapam) writes: "Despite the fact that both the Soviet Union and the United States do not wish for a new conflagration in the Middle East, and that any upheaval might topple Sadat's regime, there is no telling whether he will not implement his threats since, as is well known, logic does not always guide his decisions. We must be prepared for any development, while, at the same time, persisting with the call for political negotiations without prior conditions."

She'arim (Poalei Agudat Yisrael) writes on the psychological motives prompting Sadat and wonders which will emerge stronger, daring or fear.

Hamodia (Agudat Yisrael) writes: "The cynical crowing of the Black Septemberists who murdered the El Al employee in Rome, indicates that he does not fear the consequences of his deed — knowing that he will escape scot-free. It is incumbent upon the Italian and other European governments to prove that terrorism will not go unpunished, for only thereby will an end be put to it."

The happy morons

By EPHRAIM KISHON

IN the beginning there was the torture chamber. It was the foundation. Then, round it, you build up the secret police, the concentration camps, the politburo and you have laid a solid groundwork for an enlightened, peace-loving country like North Vietnam. The admiration of the progressive circles in the West will follow all by itself. But first of all you need a torture chamber. That is the basis, like our own, imperialistic, "stockade and watch-tower."

The 830 returning American prisoners are telling how they were maltreated. Their broken legs were placed in close-fitting irons, their arms were twisted and manacled behind their backs, they were tied up with thin wires which cut their flesh to the bone, they were beaten with fan belts over their broken ribs until they fainted. They were not tortured to extract military intelligence from them, not in the heat of battle, but systematically, day after day, over four-six-eight years, to squeeze out of them a confession for the Prime Minister of Sweden to the effect that they, the North Vietnamese, were right. Only their graves know how many prisoners succumbed in their own excrement, while Amsterdam adopted Hanoi as twin city in a ceremony marked by pomp and circumstance. 830 prisoners were left as living trump cards in the final bidding.

World keeps quiet

The world hears their story and stays silent. The very world which denounces Israeli terror. The American prisoners are interfering with the violent demonstrations in favour of the Vietnamese, so they must be forgotten as soon as possible. A number of newspapers mumble something about a historic tragedy, others accuse Nixon; see, this is where colonialism was leads. The editorial thunders against the Greek government. Because North Vietnam is a progressive country.

The war in South-East Asia is indeed endless. President Kennedy started it in an attempt to stem the spread of Communism. President Johnson turned it into a rotten and senseless war, while Nixon ate crow and saved what could still be saved. America lost its image, its prestige, itself, in this stupid war, started by a bunch of blimpish generals unable ever to win it. What was left of excellent and praiseworthy intentions like the defence of democracy and the fulfilling of a moral duty are razed villages, burnt corpses and Saigon brothels. The Vietnam war has become a symbol of corruption. Only an isolated enclave in the whole world never realized this. They had not heard about the change in values, they ignored that in the meantime the concept of patriotism had become something to be sneered at, that the honour of arms no longer existed, that "democracy" meant "rot." While Miss Jane Fonda was touring the world singing the praise of North Vietnam through the loudspeakers, the American prisoners in Hanoi were being dismembered for refusing to sign the very same song of praise. While at home young men were burning their draft cards, the prisoners were sewing an American flag out of rags and saluting it every sundown in their dark cells. They simply did not know that it was forbidden to love their country, that this was obsolete and that scorn was now fashionable.

Now they are returning, clean-shaven, in well-pressed uniforms, one-legged, in wheelchairs. Their good and honest faces beam with joy and pride. They salute with their remaining left hand, carrying signs: "God bless America, God bless the President!" They say: "If my country calls, I'll go again..."

How much sadness is there in this world.

In the middle of this great America, in the cities blanketed in smog, among the porno shops and drug dens, scattered among indifferent and soulless people, 830 Americans stand upright on their crutches, 830 Americans with crewcuts and sing: "Oh, say, can you see..." and tears flow from their eyes.

The morons. The happy morons. Translated by Yohanan Goldman. By arrangement with "Ma'ariv."

THE DREYFUS LEGEND

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I have just read Mr. Alex Berlyne's article of March 6, on French anti-Semitism. I am preparing a book about the Dreyfus case and when I began my research a few months ago, I knew virtually nothing of this subject. Now, I am inclined to agree with Mr. Berlyne.

What is puzzling to me is that French Jews, on the whole, assure me that there is no anti-Semitism in France: I find their intense patriotism almost frightening, and keep wondering if they are lying to themselves, or lying to me. About Madame Pierre Paul Levi, the daughter of Captain Dreyfus, I can assure you that she is sincere about being French and was brought up in the ordinary bourgeois cult of France, the army, the flag.

I am now looking for the Jewish folklore that grew up around the Dreyfus case. There was none, or virtually none, in France, but there was a great deal in the rest of Europe. By "folklore," I mean the songs, stories, poems — not Proust, not the literature. For instance, I have discovered that in the little villages of Eastern Poland amateur plays of an almost fairy-tale simplicity were performed in Yiddish, with Dreyfus as hero and Bolesteff — or Esterhazy — as the villain. I have talked to people who heard of them, but no one whose parents actually remembered seeing such a play. I have also discovered a Yiddish lullaby about "Dreyfus Kapitan," and have been told of yet another song, sung in a Jewish orphanage in Amsterdam, in Dutch — again, the person who told me of it remembered the tune but not the words. French Jews have a positive horror of anything of this nature — perhaps because it is folklore, and not intellectual — and it has occurred to me that Israel must now be the only country where elderly people might remember and know what I am looking for.

I wonder whether any of your readers can help me.

HOLY SEPULCHRE INCIDENT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — In reference to the picture and caption story in your issue of Sunday, April 29, on the fracas between our community and the Armenians over the Holy Fire at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, we wish to assert that the incident broke out after the second and the third torch failed to reach our congregation by means of a Syrian Orthodox youth assigned to the task. The press erred by implying that the disturbances occurred when the same youth attempted to take over the torch from the priest of another community.
